The Film Itself (4.5/5): Movie Go Movie is an average Joe story that's super laid back. It's not a super entertaining or exciting movie, but it's not supposed to be. With that said, it's a funny movie. The second half of the movie is a little bit more relaxed, which I liked. I didn't really like the first half, but it's good to know that they can make a funny movie. Maybe it's because I'm a comedian, but I really enjoyed this movie. Picture Quality (5/5): There are two versions of this movie on Blu-ray. The U.S. is on Disney black and white, while Canada is on Disney colour. I'd recommend watching the U.S. version, because the Canadian version looks a little fuzzy, even though it is an HD movie. Audio Quality (4/5): There is no audio commentary, but the dialogue is clear and sounds great. My only complaint is that the score was so loud that it caused my neighbour to complain about how much noise I was making and how I had to be quiet. The Packaging (3/5): The Blu-ray disc is black with red printing on it. There is a slipcover that's included, and it features an image of the original poster. The disc features very little artwork outside of the standard Blu-ray text. There is a digital copy redemption pamphlet, as well as a slipcover that can be placed on top of the case. Special Features (4/5): There's a couple of special features that are included on the disc.
